Speed metronome is a common goal, but rushing tempo is the slowest way to get there. A click makes speed practice systematic.

Start where it's clean

Locate the top tempo where you play it perfectly. That is your starting point.

Small steps

Raise the click by a few BPM, once it feels comfortable. Automatic speed trainers do this for you.

Burst practice

Try very short bursts faster than your limit. Your hands learn the motion before they can sustain it.

Stay relaxed

When tension creeps in, you are going online metronome too fast. Drop back 10 percent and climb again.

Consistent daily practice beats one long weekly session.