A professional with just an HIC registration can't legitimately carry out significant structural work. An excellent contractor has excellent partnerships with experienced and trusted subs. That means the subs will turn up when required and do great with very little supervision. They understand what degree of job the contractor expects, they understand they'll earn money promptly, and they understand that the task will be ready for them when they show up. For example, the drywallers can't hang their drywall till the plumbing and electric are completed and the walls are shielded.
