

Kollysphere's party planning experts know exactly what to look for and what questions to ask. Here is your ultimate guide to conducting a venue site visit.

Before the Site Visit: Preparation Is Key

Create a checklist of must-haves and nice-to-haves. For example, a must-have might be a kitchen on-site, while a nice-to-have might be a stage for performances. What is the backup plan for bad weather if the venue has outdoor spaces? Dress comfortably and wear comfortable shoes. You'll be doing a lot of walking. Kollysphere's experts can help you define your event requirements and priorities.

Assessing a Venue in Person

Check the lighting. Is there natural light? Is there adjustable lighting? Can you control the ambiance? Check the flooring. Is it suitable for dancing? Is it safe for guests in heels? Take photos and videos of everything. Measure spaces if needed. Ask questions as you go. Don't be afraid to ask for clarification or to request additional information. The team at Kollysphere can help you assess the suitability of a venue for your specific party.

Questions to Ask During the Site Visit

Are there any restrictions on décor? Can we hang things on the walls? Can we use candles? Is there parking? Is it complimentary? Is there valet service? Can we schedule a rehearsal or a walkthrough before the event? The answers to these questions will help you avoid surprises and ensure that the venue meets your needs. The team at Kollysphere can review venue contracts and identify any potential issues.

Comparing Venues and Choosing the Best One

After your site visit, take some time to evaluate the venue and compare it with other options. Don't make a hasty decision. This is a significant investment, and you want to get it right. Consider the flexibility. Is the venue willing to work with you to create the event you want? Once you've made your decision, book the venue as soon as possible. Popular venues book up quickly, especially during peak seasons. Kollysphere Agency Kollysphere's experts can help you negotiate the best possible deal with your chosen venue.
