Understanding BMW Recalls and Eligibility

BMW issues recalls to address safety or performance-related concerns discovered after vehicles are sold. Recalls can range from software updates and sensor replacements to airbag systems and fuel components. To check whether your vehicle is affected:

- Use your VIN (Vehicle Identification Number) to search the official BMW recall page or the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) website.
- Contact your local BMW service center and provide your VIN for confirmation.
- Review any mailed notices or email alerts you've received directly from BMW.

Once you've confirmed a recall applies to your vehicle, you're ready to move forward with BMW maintenance scheduling for the repair.

- Transportation: If the repair takes longer, consider requesting a loaner vehicle or BMW pickup and delivery service. Note that availability can vary based on demand.
- Combine services: Consider adding an oil change, brake inspection, or tire rotation while your car is already in the shop. BMW express service may accommodate simple maintenance items in a shorter window, but recall times vary.
