When a work phone has a smashed screen, the real cost is rarely the repair itself but the hours of lost calls, missed messages and unavailable apps while it sits in a drawer. For small firms, sole traders and teams with a handful of company devices, Free Fusion in Corby offers business phone screen repair designed to keep that downtime short. As independent device specialists, we can deal with phones, tablets and laptops from one place, so you are not chasing three different suppliers.

The quickest way to reduce disruption is to know what you have. Keep a simple list of company devices, with the make, model and who uses each one, and ask staff to report damage straight away rather than carrying on with a cracked display. Glass that is already splintered can worsen with every pocket and van dashboard, and a small crack can spread until the touch layer stops responding. A phone that is repaired early is also less likely to need extra work on the display underneath.

Before bringing a device in, make sure work data is backed up and that you or the user have the passcode to hand. If the phone is managed by your company through a mobile device management system, or tied to a business Apple ID or Google account, check with whoever administers it, because those settings can affect testing after a repair. For pricing, iPhone screens start from £24.99 and iPad screens from £39.99, and we also repair Samsung Galaxy, Google Pixel and other Android handsets. Where several phones need attention, bring them together and say which are most urgent, such as maps.app.goo.gl phone screen repair the ones used by drivers, site managers or anyone who takes customer calls, so that the most important devices can be dealt with first.

Speed matters in a working day, and most smartphone screen and battery replacements are completed within about an hour at the Corby centre. Staff can often drop a phone in and collect it before the afternoon rounds begin. Business and school device repair is a core part of what we do, covering laptop screens, keyboards, batteries and charging ports on MacBooks and Windows machines as well. If a team member is based elsewhere in the UK, postal repair through Royal Mail or DPD is available too, with mailed devices typically tested and dispatched the same day they arrive. A tidy handover also helps, so label each phone with the user's name and keep chargers, cases and any work SIM cards separate until the repair is finished. Afterwards, a decent case and a tempered glass protector can cut the chance of a repeat visit.

To talk through a single handset or a few devices at once, call Free Fusion on 01536 260 558 or call in at 62a High St, Corby, and we will help keep your business connected.
