

Large Oak Tree Trimming: Protecting Mature Canopies in Central Florida

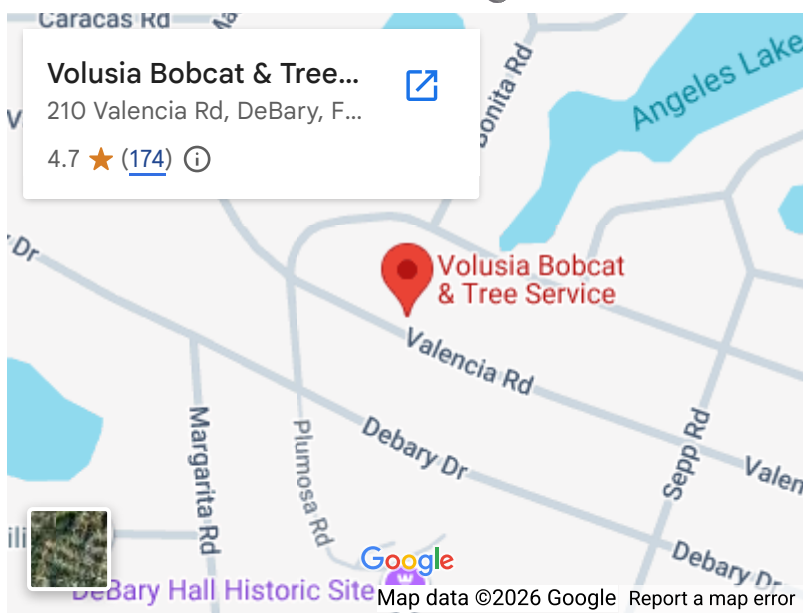

Mature oaks can dominate a property, provide shade, and develop extremely heavy limbs. Trimming a large oak requires careful decisions about which branches should be removed, which should remain, and how to avoid over-thinning the canopy. Look for Dead, Broken and Conflicting Limbs Deadwood, broken branches, crossing limbs, poorly attached growth, and branches contacting structures are common reasons to prune. The priority changes when a limb could affect a roof, walkway, driveway, or occupied area. Match the Method to the Species Palms, pines, mature oaks, young shade trees, and ornamental trees do not all respond the same way to pruning. The species and growth habit should influence how the canopy is managed. Questions to Ask Before Hiring- What is the objective of the trimming?

- Which limbs or canopy areas are included?
- Is deadwood removal part of the scope?
- Will branches be lowered or allowed to fall?

- How will roofs, fences, pools, landscaping, vehicles, and neighboring property be protected?
- Is debris chipping and hauling included?
- Is follow-up pruning recommended later?
